Possibility of more US energy coming to India: Puri

OUR CORRESPONDENT

NEW DELHI: There is a possibility of more US energy coming to India in the wake of the new administration under President Donald Trump announcing plans to maximise oil and gas production, Union Minister Hardeep Singh Puri on Tuesday said.

The number of India's oil suppliers has already gone up from 27 to 39 and "if more oil comes in, this is something that we welcome", Puri, the Minister for Petroleum and Natural Gas, told reporters on the sidelines of auto industry body SIAM's 3rd International Symposium for Thriving Eco-Energy in Mobility event.

He was responding to a query about new US President Donald Trump's steps to increase oil drilling and gas production.

"If you were to ask me whether more American energy is going to come onto the market, my answer is yes. If you say there is a potent possibility of more purchase of energy between India and the US, the answer is yes," he said.

Further, Puri said, "In the last three and half years, we have been in the market for whoever can supply."
